Green Joy Production will build its new medical cannabis production centre in L'Ange-Gardien

L'Ange-Gardien (Gatineau), Quebec – April 30, 2018 – Green Joy Production (“Green Joy”) will begin construction and development of its new medical cannabis production facility at its industrial site located in L'Ange-Gardien in the Outaouais region. This decision, which follows Health Canada's confirmation that Green Joy has successfully completed the security clearance phase, will allow the company to become a licensed producer of medical cannabis in accordance with the Access to Cannabis for Medical Purposes Regulations (ACMPR).

“Green Joy's mission is to meet the growing medical cannabis demand to address the needs of patients, cannabinoid-based pharmaceutical developers, as well as to those of the medical community who is increasingly recommending medical cannabis products to their patients” says Marc St-Arnaud, co-owner and CEO of Green Joy Production.

Green Joy plans to develop specific expertise in cannabis oil extraction and production. The demand for this product is set to increase significantly in the coming years to meet a range of therapeutic needs.

Green Joy's production facilities will be located on a 25-acre industrial site that will provide 734,000 square feet of fully secure production facilities. The first phase of the project will include a 34,000-square-foot facility for multiple-level indoor production of high-quality medical cannabis. This facility will produce 3,300 kg of medical cannabis and create 50 jobs. Production will be overseen by a rigorous quality control program and supported by a research and development centre. This first phase of the project will represent an investment of $21.5 million.

Phases 2 and 3 will involve the addition of 300,000 and 400,000 square feet of production facilities, respectively, which will create 250 additional jobs over the next five years. These phases will lead to the expansion of the research centre's activities, as well as collaboration with specialized academic researchers.
